The session was delivered by Mr. Ashokan. S, a professional Angular Fullstack Developer, who provided valuable insights into project planning, development methodologies, and industry expectations.

The orientation session focused on:

- Understanding the purpose and scope of project work
- Introduction to modern development technologies
- Best practices for full-stack development
- Guidelines for documentation and presentation
- Real-world project expectations from the IT industry

Mr. Ashokan shared practical knowledge from his professional experience, motivating students to adopt systematic development approaches.

The Project Orientation Program successfully enriched students with an industrial perspective on project execution. The guidance offered by the resource person and the coordinated efforts of the department's faculty members contributed to the event's effectiveness. This initiative aligns with the institution's commitment to academic excellence and career-focused learning.
